I put all my notes in this box because it was deleted last time and I have a lot to tell you. You are young, but you have it, and are a natural. Great look. Great framing, demand the frame more. Come into it, show that you are not just a young actor but an actor. I want you start studying emotions, not just acting. This is not always easy for a young actor. But, when you are "sad," ask yourself, "What is sadness?" Am I sad because someone died or am I sad because I dropped my popsicle on the ground. Those are different forms of sadness, and you need to understand them, find out if something from your real life relates to that and then apply it. If you have had a love one die on you, remember how that felt when talking about it. Really start bringing in the realism into the cinema. You are incredible and you will make it 100%. Great job, always wonderful seeing you. Watch a lot of Leo DiCaprio, Nicole Kidman (90s), Emma Stone, now they are in older subject matter movies so watch there PG 13 ones.

Good use of humor and awkwardness

Good energy but sometimes i feel you may be taken a bit too much to respond m

So not to rush but can still be a little faster well done again! (just putting this here in case there's an issue with the multiple appearances - feedback from the other performance - Alayna fantastic!!! I really got the sense of the characters sadness and disappointment. Love this. Really enjoyed how you reacted to your partners information.)

Hello again! I could watch you all day, haha. Love your reaction to the ridiculous idea for the charity telethon. Leading up to that moment you were very genuinely being a teen and I like how you use and bring in your environment with your eyeline. It really expands the scene and shows your experience. Great ending. Can't wait to see you again :)

Better in her last scene, but she did a nice job of 'filling in' for Naomi.
