Nice job! Even when you lost your spot in the script at times, you stayed focused, recovered, and jumped right back into the scene, which is great. I would work on picking up the pacing a bit, as there were moments where the scene started to drag. Keeping that energy moving will help the scene feel even more natural and engaging. Overall, nice work!

Nice work Maxi! I was especially impressed with how you recovered well from losing your line , and finished stronger than you started!

I would brighten the lighting a bit to see your eyes a bit more. The acting was good, and near the end when the scene was getting more sad/ vulnerable I would try to showcase those feelings a bit more. Keep up the great work though!

Beautiful vulnerability in this one, my only feedback would be to work on a bit of movement, to make it a bit more natural and this can help with the flow of words as well by connecting an action to the words, but I love the emotional energy changes in this.

Nice to see you again! This scene was a great one for you. When you forgot your line thank you for taking your time to get back on track, just keep working on not letting those moments show on your face. When you are in the moment and fully immersed in your character you are ON and it's great to see, so take a deep breathe beforehand and be confident in your talent...you have what it takes so keep believing in yourself :) Thanks again for your dedication!

Your passion really cut through. Sometimes the pauses were too long. The awkwardness of your character really cut through. Great job.

This was a lovely scene to showcase his skills. Nice recovery when he missed his line. He has a Jesse Eisenberg quality.
